Boy are my fingers sore. I'll work on the herb source list later. 8-)
I hope this will get you started on a list of garden seed suppliers.
This is the time of year to start planning that big garden. Yep big garden is conducive to sore muscles and backs - lower fresh vegetable bills - higher water bill - the great satisfaction that you did it yourself. TNT

There is a company here locally that sells all sorts of nitro-packed stuff including #10 cans of assorted seeds. The name of the company is Nitro-Pak Preparedness Center. They have a local showroom and also do mail order. One #10 can, if I remember correctly, is $25. Their phone is (310)802-2635.

Just got my new Nitro-Pak catalog. On the second page they advertise #10 cans of seeds (nitrogen packed of course) for $24.95 which is item # 5600. They show to be on a winter special with a normal price of $49.95. The cans I have hold 25 foil packets of seeds. The sixteen varieties include such goodies as: sweet corn, squash, beans, peas, onion, peppers, cantaloupe, watermelon, pumpkin, spinach, cabbage, turnips, cucumber, lettuce, tomato, carrots, and beets.

Subj : Seed Conservation - Heirloom Seed Catalog List

For anyone interested in how crossbreeding and biotechnology are affecting our food crops, there's a very good article in October 1993 Vegetarian Times (P.O. Box 570, Oak Park, IL 60303, 1-800-435-9610) The article discusses how many, many varieties of plants are going extinct and how that leaves us vulnerable to disasters like the Irish Potato Famine and 1971's Southern Corn Leaf Blight. Also talks about conservation efforts, including government-run "seed banks" (which apparently are pretty useless - not surprising, considering who's running them). A lot of the conservation efforts are going on at the backyard level, with several small seed companies and non-profit organizations involved. A list is below, incorporating info from the article and from rec.garden's herb.faq.

The below companies sell heirloom and/or open-pollinated seeds (according to this article, "...the seed of open-pollinated plants can be saved for subsequent plantings, unlike hybrid seeds, which do not breed true-to-form and therefore must be bought anew next year...Large seed companies prefer hybrids because they can sell more seed...)

The type of corn that is best suited for this purpose would be a type called a FLOUR CORN. Kernals of flour corn are easier to grind than flint or dent corn, milling easily to a soft flour. It's grown primarily in the Southwest and the Northern Plains.

It's available with kernals that are either blue/purple, multi-colored, red/pink, white, yellow, and black. I'll give you the names of the yellow varieties plus some sources.

From: Kay Klier

Subject: Great strange plants...

Date: 27 Jan 92 23:59:42 GMT

Just started to mark up my copy of the Nichol's Garden Nursery catalog (herbs and rare seed specialists) 1190 North Pacific Highway, Albany, OR, 97321. Haven't seen this catalog for years, and I guess I forgot all the lovely strange things they carry:

For instance:

Nepeta mussini, a low-growing rock garden catnip that my cats seem to think is the cat-equivalent of Acapulco gold.

Coriander or Cilantro: a slow-bolting form

Epazote: Chenopodium ambrosoides

Good King Henry: Chenopodium bonus-henricus

Anise hyssop: Agastache foeniculus. Licorice-scented leaves, nice blue flowers the bees love (no, you don't get licorice flavored honey).

Tagetes lucida: a 3' marigold that makes a pretty good substitute for tarragon.

Sweet Woodruff: for Mai-wine and potpourri

Pyrethrum: grow your own.

Some things I think I recall people asking about/talking about recently:

Fraxinella (gas plant)

Hops (for flavoring beer and ale) (yes, they are the other genus in the Cannabinaceae (or Cannabaceae, take your pick) -- anyhow,

Seeds_1992.txt

first cousin to marijuana
Saffron crocus bulbs
Walking onions
Elephant garlic
yellow potatoes (bintje is great in potato salad!)
yard long beans (no, green, not purple) celtuce miniature sweet corn (advise picking no more than 5 days after silks appear) jicama
tomatillo
11 cvs hot pepper
12 cvs sweet pepper (incl. pepperoncini)

Oddities that caught my eye:

black radish (black skin, white flesh)

Oregon Spring and Santiam tomatoes, two determinant types that are parthenocarpic. In poor growing conditions, fruits will be seedless. About 10 days earlier than Early Girl.

Lion's ears (Leonotus nepetifolia): a 3-5 ft mint plant with whorls of orange flowers. The hummingbirds like this South African native.

Lobelia 'Compliment Scarlet': a tetraploid cross between L. fulgens and L. cardinalis. Should be large (1-1.5") bright red flowers that hummingbirds ought to find irresistible.

Chinese lantern plant (Physalis alkekengi): "husk tomatoes" with bright orange husks. Made about $100 one year selling that to florists on $1 worth of seed...

Bushel gourd: a lageneria with fruits to 20" across.

also LOTS of oriental veggies....

lots of "mainstream veggies" and a fair amount of wildflower and ornamental seeds. Interesting plants for drying. Prices about 1/2-3/4 of "rack" prices for packeted seeds (Burpee, NK, etc.) around here.

Also will sell largish quantities of seed to ordinary people at wholesale prices (usually 25-50% off). (e.g., 4 oz beets $2.45, but 1 lb for $5.35) $1 handling per order east of Rockies. Add $0.20 per pound rest of Rockies.

'Nother neat catalog:

Liberty Seed Company, PO Box 806, New Philadephia, OH 44663.

Seeds_1992.txt

Lots of good, basic seeds, including 34 cultivars of sweet corn, and some FUN seeds like:

Ornamental wheat for weaving and bouquets:

black heads and black awns

white heads and black awns

white heads and white awns and 'Gigas': 3 1/2" heads with 1" long spikelets (HUGE!!) and grey or black awns.

Podcorn: like a regular ear of field corn, but with "husks" surrounding each kernal.

Broomcorn: not a corn, but a sorghum with long inflorescence branches. It's the stuff real "cornbrooms" are made from. Since the tips of the inflorescences are covered with shiny yellow, red, brown, mahogany or black "seeds", they've apparently been considered decorative by the florists.

Plant a handful of epazote plants, and you'll never have to buy seed again. They happily reseed all over, and grow like--um, weeds. Which, if you didn't know what they were, is what you'd think of them.

Seeds_1992.txt

Mine are currently a gorgeous maroon color, tinged with scarlet, by the way.
Their last gasp of the season.

Here are some mail order addresses for peppers. I got them in context of a discussion of hot peppers, but they may have some sweet peppers available. I would also check standard seed catalogs for sweet peppers.

Article 7656 (59 more) in rec.gardens:
From: John V. Martinez
Subject: SUMMARY: (re: WANTED - chinese tallow tree seeds)
Date: 22 May 92 04:02:42 GMT

Hi Netters!

A couple of weeks ago I posted a request for information on a source of seeds for the Chinese Tallow Tree. As promised, here is a summary of (all 3) responses.

[text deleted]

Scientific name is Sapium sebiferum, of the Euphorbiaceae. Don't know where to find it, but Hortus III indicates that it is naturalized in the southern US. Also sold as "vegetable tallow tree"

Seeds_1992.txt

I have never seen the seeds for sale, but I have seen the tree (I believe), all over Hawaii.

According to CORNUCOPIA: A Source Book of Edible Plants by Stephen Facciola (ISBN 0-9628087-0-9), seeds for the chinese tallow tree (Sapium sebiferum) are available from the following mail-order sources (sorry, none in GA).

J.L. Hudson, Seedsman
P.O. Box 1058
Redwood City, CA 94064

SASE not required... Hudson's catalog is too big for a standard envelope. Add an extra dollar for a one-year subscription to his rare seeds supplement... comes out 2-3 times a year, and lists seeds that have recently arrived and may not be available in large enough quantities to be listed in the main catalog.

His catalog is great reading... it always leaves me with a very bad case of acreage-lust (I want enough garden space to grow two of everything). Nice folks, too... I usually enclose a letter with my order letting them know how my previous year's plants turned out, and I've always gotten a note back in response (usually from Hudson himself). The Zapotec Collection contains some very interesting varieties... I really love the Manzano Amarillo chile (fuzzy leaves, apple-shaped green fruits turning yellow/orange when ripe, flavorful, and VERY HOT).

Seeds Blum
Idaho City Stage
Boise, Idaho

These folks get #very# badly backlogged in the spring. I usually get their catalog right around Christmas time, and I've learned to send in the order immediately... one year I waited until the end of February to order, and my seeds took over eight weeks to arrive.

Seeds_1992.txt

They're a good source of heirloom and traditional vegetable varieties...
no F1 hybrids at all.

and some hybrids. They have herbs, flowers, grains, and vegetables, as well as information and sales of storage techniques for short, medium, and long term storage.

It said that you could grow seeds from hybrid planets, but you would not know what you might get. Then if you endeavored to breed these strains into something stable, it takes from 6 to 10 years. So it could take forever (literally if your life depends on it) to breed the right plant for your area.

Whereas the hybrids are bred for commercial use for things like maximum output at optimum conditions, uniform size and color, sometimes with no thought about taste, and maturation time just to name a few. Where open-pollinated varieties have been bred for the areas that they are grown in, and have advantages like the fact that they still produce a good yield even when things have not been optimal, as well as that a gardener might not want his crop to come on at the same time, plus we all know they taste better.

There is also information on how to join several seed exchanges that you can join to get seeds that were bred for your area, and so that this important gene pool can be kept healthy.

Well the company's name is "Southern Exposure Seed Exchange" and a catalogue can be had by calling (804)-973-4703. It says it has a price of $3.00, but when I called they just took my name and address and said they would send me one.

Please do! I archive much of what passes through that echo. If you have FTP access:

ftp sunsite.unc.edu

cd pub/academic/medicine/alternative-healthcare

A wholistic medicine group here in Chapel Hill, The Community Wholistic Health Center is building a database of reference material on:

nutrition
herbalism
homeopathic medicine acupuncture
naturopathic medicine

A new acquaintance in Vienna, Austria is involved in building a similar database

Seeds_1992.txt

on a machine there, a project funded by the City of Vienna! He will work with CWHC in building the database at sunSITE.

Soon you will be able to access that data with the sunSITE GOPHER. You will be able to browse through all the FTP directory trees and read/retrieve-by-e-mail all files contained therein. When it's fully installed and online (a week or so):

telnet sunsite.unc.edu
login: gopher

Also you might want to look at:

telnet twosocks.ces.ncsu.edu
login: gopher

(lots of sustainable agriculture material and many other library and information resources)

If you're interested in organic gardening and farming have a look at a database of sustainable agriculture material that I am building:

ftp sunsite.unc.edu
```

cd pub/academic/agriculture/sustainable_agriculture (site info file is UPDATE)
